With the successful completion of the Dakin House roofing system renovations, I felt it was appropriate to commend Princeton Construction Group for a job well done. The time constraints imposed at the start of the project were quite aggressive, however this did not deter Princeton from completing the work on schedule. This was accomplished by good crew size and attentive supervision and project management. Even with the imposition of several change order requests on the part of Merck, the project proceeded on track. The entire labor staff of Princeton Construction, as well as their subcontractors (Coffee Brothers, Inc. Roofing, Oak Sheet Metal Company and Strumolo Construction) worked in a professional manner with attention to safety and good construction practices.

I would therefore recommend that Princeton Construction Group be given consideration for future projects for Merck & Co.
